BOSTON WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

FIRST TIME SINCE 1961

BUCCI BREAKS SCORING RECORD

PROVIDENCE WINS INAUGURAL WOMEN'S TITLE

by Oscar Shirley

The Boston Club of the Deaf was the host of the 46th annual NEAAD Basketball Tournament and also the first annual Women Basketball competition in Arlington, Mass. 585 registered fans, players, delegates and officers were in attendance. Alma Bournazian and her committee were to be applauded for their hard working efforts which included the Hall of Fame banquet and Ballroom with live band and Las Vegas Nite on March 1 and 2, 1991. There were seven men's teams and two women's teams competing.

In the first game of the tournament, Quincy was pitted against the newcomers, Connecticut African-American Deaf Advocate (CAADA). In the first half the game was close, but later in the game the experience of Quincy proved to be too much for CAADA. Ron Koehler paced the winners with 18 points while Ed Pratt, former GHCD and Bridgeport Greater came out of retirement and led all scorers with 21 points including 3-3 point goals. He last played in 1974. The game was played in four eight minute quarters while it was supposed to be 10 minutes per period. It was due to the lack of communications between the commissioner and Host Club. The score was Quincy 59, CAADA 36.

In the second game, Worcester met a powerful team, Bridgeport. Bridgeport team was consisted mostly of players playing for Holyoke a couple of years ago. It seemed that Worcester every year had a secret weapon. This time it was Nathan Moulden, 5'6" dynamite who baffled Bridgeport with his plays such as penetrating, dishing assists, hounding ball all day and scoring. Bridgeport got frustrated so bad that both teams began pushing and shoving one another which saw one player ejected from the game. Oh, yeah, Moulden, a rookie,

Message from the President of NEAAD — Jim Pederson

On behalf of NEAAD, I am looking forward to an exciting NEAAD Regional Tournament — the 40th Annual Men's and 16th Annual Women's Slo-Pitch Softball Tournament in Providence, Rhode Island this summer, August 23, and 24, 1991. The hardworking committee members of the Providence Deaf Club will make a successful tournament.

Nancy V. Becker, NEAAD Secretary-Treasurer mailed out a packet of information to the member clubs about meeting announcement, registration form, AAAD highlight, officer's reports and many more. An increase of $2.00 fee on top of the Regional and AAAD registration fees will go to the AAAD Players' Fund to take care of the transportation expenses for the women's basketball teams.

Have a pleasant summer! See you at the softball tournament.

Publicity Director's Note

by Paul Ditimi

Our cover story, the Deaf Basketball Tournament in Boston, offers me the opportunity to point out how our coverage gives you all the information you need about the issues and events that concern the New England Athletic Association of the Deaf. The Bulletin is timely, thorough and friendly.

Speaking of tournaments, be sure to mark your calendars: The NEAAD Softball Tournament is on the 23rd, 24th and 25th of August in Providence, Rhode Island. Everyone is sure to have a great time, so you'll want to sign up right away. See the advertisement on page 9 for more details.

Although this year's only half over, it's time to start thinking about the 1992 elections. NEAAD is opening nominations for anyone interested in becoming officers of the organization. President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, all the big positions will be open. The only requirements are strong leadership qualities, and a desire to help NEAAD and the member clubs. By working together, we can help preserve all these clubs for generations to come. But it won't happen if we're all not involved.

With that in mind, thanks to Oscar Shirley whose help with the stories about the NEAAD and AAAD Tournaments was invaluable. His wealth of experience in writing about sports activities came in very handy, and I appreciate his cooperation greatly. I hope his pencil stays sharp, because we'll need his help next year when the Greater Bridgeport Association of the Deaf hosts the tournament. That'll be on February 29 (leap year!) and March 1 of 1992. The registration fee will be $6.00 for everyone.

See you in Providence!

PROVIDENCE WINS INAUGURAL NEAAD WOMEN'S BASKETBALL TITLE

by Oscar Shirley

In the first Women's Basketball Tournament in NEAAD history, Terri Ditimi scored the first basket on a fast break for CAADA. But Providence, paced by Jo-Ann O'Neil (former three time USA DEAF basketball player), Mary Essex and Nancy O'Neil, the Providence Club whipped the CAADA Ladies by the score of 50 to 20, and earned the right to participate in the AAAD tournament in Atlantic City, New Jersey, during the first week of April. Essex and Jo-Ann O'Neil were the high scorers for the winners, with 13 and 12 points respectively, while Ditimi led the losers with 12, and Juanita Pettway shone on defense.

drew oohs and ahs from the crowds and was high scorer with 26 points. Nick Testone was the best for the losers with 18 points and 14 points. Know the old cliche "Too many chefs spoil the broth" — that is the problem with Bridgeport having too many stars and too many coaches. The final score was Worcester 79 Bridgeport 73.

In the third game, the two winningest teams of NEAAD basketball history met each other. They were Providence with ten titles and Greater Hartford with nine rings. But you know that no one man team can beat a five man team — well, in this game it almost did. With the likes of Steve Rusconi, Mike Raye, James Wooten and Donald Leavenworth all good players hitting the bricks all day, GHCD scored only one point in the first quarter — that's right, just one point! It was hard to tell if GHCD forgot how to play at all such as shooting, dribbling, passing, defense or anything else you may name. Bruce Bucci carried Providence by netting 41 points which matched GHCD's total score. The final score was Providence 90 GHCD 41.

Host Boston showed poor hospitality when the Beantown drubbed Quincy by the score of 112 to 54. They had too many guns and had a great chemistry among the players. Alex Hoover tallied 41 points but Matthew Samuel playing like Magic Johnson made the team look good. Ron Koehler's 16 points was high for the losers.

A scoring duel was expected between Bruce Bucci and rookie Nathan Moulden when Providence met Worcester. Providence had better supporting cast for Bucci as he broke the record Edward Dawson set for individual scoring in 1968 of 46 points, with his 48 points. Moulden did not disappoint the crowd with his 24 points. The final score was Providence 92 Worcester 77.

Thirty Years ago Boston and Providence battled for the championship which the Beantown club won. History repeated. Boston celebrated much awaited title by outplaying Bruce Bucci and his valets. Bucci was held to 31 points, his lowest in three games played. However, Bucci shattered the scoring record of the tournament held by GHCD's Martin Jones with 121 points for the average 40.3 points per game. Hones had 109 points in 1979. Matthew Samuel again led the scoring balance among his teammates. Alex Hoover had 23 and Calvin Goosby had 22 points while M. Samuel contributed 20 points and played outstanding all around performance thus helping Boston on the way to AAAD tournament in Atlantic City. BCD 100 PCD 76.

HIGHLIGHTS FROM THE AAAD TOURNAMENT

NOTES ON NEAAD TEAMS

VARIOUS TIDBITS

by Oscar Shirley

Boston drew a tough opponent, Lincoln of Nebraska, in the opening round. The Mid-West club boasted an All-American football player from the University of Nebraska who was drafted in the sixth round as a linebacker by the Denver Broncos. He is Kenny Walker who was the Deaf Player of AAAD this year. Boston lost this game by the score of 106 to 55. Alex Hoover was the high scorer with 24 points. In the losing bracket, Boston lost to NJCCD, the host team, by the score of 75 to 68.

The Providence Ladies drew a very tough team from Washington, MWAD, which is favored to win the championship with two other teams from the West. MWAD was paced by former GHCD's women's softball great, Marsh Wetzel, who was chosen the Most Valuable Player in the recent SEAAD tournament. MWAD went on to win the title. The score was MWAD 100 - Providence 61. In the losers' bracket, the Providence Club nipped the Trenton Club by the score of 65 to 63. On the Trenton team was Colleen Francis, who played, and will play, for Holyoke.

In the men's games, Hollywood boasted two former NEAAD players who greatly contributed to that team in finishing runner-up to MWAD. They are Daryl Wetzel and Steve Covington.

Quite a few New England fans attended AAAD. So were many former New Englanders. Jack Levesque, Cole Zulauf, Al Couthen, and Ricky Osgood. Those there were NEAAD officers Jim Pedersen, Nancy Becker, Paul Ditimi and Oscar Shirley, and fans, William Manger, Francis Rooney, Joe Ricuitti and the supporting cast of Boston and Providence. Oh, and don't forget the hard-working Alma Bournazian.

The 47th Annual New England Athletic Association of the Deaf Basketball Tournament will be hosted by the Greater Bridgeport Association of the Deaf, February 29, and March 1, 1992 at Platt Regional Vocational Tech in Milford, Connecticut. This is a very good location close to motels, restaurants and a ballroom, all of which are very easy to find.

The lowest accommodation rates are at Red Roof Motel, Susse Chalet, and Milford Hotel. They average between thirty-five and forty-five dollars a night. Howard Johnson and Holiday Inn are between fifty-five and seventy dollars a night. The closest hotels to the ballroom are Red Roof and Susse Chalet.

Special Combo tickets for the Hall of Fame Banquet, the ballroom and Saturday and Sunday's games, are $32.00 until August 18, 1991. Tickets for games and ballroom only are $27.00 After August 18, ticket prices will be $37.00 and $32.00, respectively. Final deadline for tickets is February 1, 1991. Checks should be made payable to GBAD/NEAAD, and mailed to Mike Sabia, 20 Norman Road, Stamford, Connecticut 06906.

MEETING THE CHALLENGES

by Rick Stahr

"God answered my prayers!" Fran said, looking to the clear skies. The forecasted storm had not materialized, thus making his attempt at swimming from Falkner Island to Hammonesett Beach possible. The island lay five miles off the coast of Connecticut in Long Island Sound, and the cool October weather presented a formidable challenge. Having arrived early in the day, Fran greeted those who arrived to assist or support him at the marina, including a member of the local Coast Guard Auxiliary and co-worker from the American School for the Deaf. Herb May, himself hearing-impaired, readied his speed boat to ferry well-wishers along the course of Fran's swim. As the Auxiliary members readied their SCUBA and rescue gear, others took pictures and videotape of the events. Then the call came from the Coast Guard Auxiliary; it was time to begin.

Francis Cooney is an employee of the American School for the Deaf and an avid swimmer. Although he is just over 30 years old, he felt confident swimming the cold, choppy waters of the sound to call attention to the educational needs of deaf children. According to Cooney, there is a growing sentiment towards eliminating the choice of educational settings in Connecticut and, perhaps, elsewhere. Supporting parents' free choice in deciding an educational system, whether mainstream programs or Center Schools, Cooney decided to use this swim to publicize the issue. Deaf since early childhood, Cooney had experienced both mainstream and Center School education, and believed the differences in the two warranted informed decision-making by parents and educators.

Speeding towards the island were three Coast Guard Auxiliary boats and the "Grady May", Herb May's boat. Cooney donned his wet suit while Auxiliary members readied the inflatable, motorized raft that would follow him along the course. Finally, with the island nearby, Cooney jumped into the water and began the trek. Using the breast stroke almost exclusively, he headed towards the distant horizon. Binoculars aboard the "Grady May" assisted on-lookers in spotting the landing point, almost indistinguishable due to the distance. He swam persistently for what seemed like hours, fighting waves and numbing cold. Suddenly, he stopped, and the rescue raft drew nearer; Cooney had been stung by a Jelly fish. The raft sped towards an auxiliary boat to pick up meat tenderizer, a common remedy for the pain of a sting. Soon, he was back on track and nearing the shore. About one mile out from the beach, though, a problem developed. "He's not making any headway." came the call over the radio. "He's fighting the current." came another. For twenty excruciating minutes, Cooney paddled towards the shore, only to be pushed back by the tide. What had been .9 miles was now measured at 1.1 miles—he was losing ground. The decision was made to change his course, sending him across the tide instead of directly into it. In his attempt, however, he was being pushed further east than what was intended. The people at Hammonesett were told to move to a spot about a mile or two down the shore line, and then a mile or two more. With each yard towards shore, Cooney was moving a yard east. Another hour past — he was already two hours past his scheduled landing time. He was approaching the breakwater, a wall of rocks that jutted into the water several hundred feet to stem the waves. The large Auxiliary vessels, unable to navigate the shallow, rocky waters, radioed each other the attempt should be scrubbed. The response came back, "He's not giving up." Those waiting on shore were finally moved to the marina where the boats would eventually dock while Cooney plodded along towards the breakwater. Other boats cold only watch from a distance as the rescue raft tailed him. Finally, seven hours and twelve miles later, Cooney touched the wall and climbed into the rescue raft. On the journey back to the marina, the call came over the radio "His temperature is 96 degrees, he's exhausted, but otherwise, fine!"
